Dear Frustrated Investor,

If you'd like to add an extra "zero" or two to the end of your brokerage account balance, a ...if you can spend just a few minutes each day to read a simple, straight-forward update at 3:17 p.m. Eastern Time... then this will be the most unbelievable (but true) message you'll ever receive.

Here's why:

There's now a new subscription service that, up until right now, COULD NOT be offered to the public. That's right... genius Chicago trader Jon "Doctor J" Najarian had to resign his seat on the C.B.O.E. (Chicago Board of Options Exchange) to be able to bring his "brain child" into the limelight! (and to avoid the conflicts of being a former board member).

After 23 years of experience in the trenches literally rising to the top (in an industry where average career lasts only 22 months) and even earning his nick-name from his 3-letter trading badge... "DRJ"...

The truth is...

Jon Gave Up His Membership at the C.B.O.E. Because the Rules of the Board Didn't Allow Him to Speak Directly to the Public!

What's More, He Honestly Has Developed a Way You Can Profit Like a Legal "Insider"... Over and Over Again, No Matter Which Way the Market Goes – And Put Your Money Where All the "Big-Money Players" Are Putting Theirs!

So after 23 long years of trial and error experience, tweaking, testing and adjusting, Jon confidently and comfortably resigned his seat... knowing that he could profit HUGE from his personal knowledge.

Jon learned a lot... no doubt about it. But more importantly, he gained a lot of wisdom.

Let me explain...

The following true story about Research in Motion (RIMM) will show you how powerful Jon's insights and discoveries are...just imagine how well you could have done had you known this:

On Monday, Dec 22nd, 2003, at approximately 3:00 pm Eastern Time, Research in Motion (ticker: RIMM) was trading for $46.42 per share, up $1.96 on the trading day, with one hour left before the close of the market.

After the close of trading that day, RIMM was planning to announce their 3rd quarter earnings results. (And in case you've never heard of RIMM before, this is a pretty ordinary "tech" stock that deals with hand-held 'PDA' devices that are widely known as Blackberry's).

Anyway, up until this point in December 2003, RIMM had been in an up-trend for most of the year (along with most other tech stocks), however in the 3 months leading up to December 22nd, the stock had been eerily flat.

And RIMM was lucky to just have a flat, sideways moving stock...because most other tech-related stocks, during this same time-frame, were in a free fall.

Here's why: Tech stocks, along with most other stocks, had enjoyed solid, healthy gains for nearly an entire year – in fact – it got so good, it started to remind reporters and stock analysts of the now infamous "internet bubble" craze of '99.

And soon enough, due to these new headlines, tech shares started to race lower...riding the wave of injected fear that maybe, just maybe... they'd gone up "too far too fast"...?

And on the afternoon of Monday, December 22nd, with the holidays approaching, this is the kind of thing that gripped investors.

Back to RIMM...

At about exactly this same time (approximately 3:00 pm Eastern Time) – some whistles and bells were literally sounding off – causing a subscriber alert to be issued via email, as well as to be posted to a specific website.

The bells and whistles were tied to Jon Najarian's four separate computer servers, which connected to all five major option exchanges around the country (Chicago, the Pacific, AMEX, New York, and Philly exchanges)

And what the computer screen was telling Jon was down right unbelievable.

Right there, at around 3:00 p.m. Eastern time, institutional-sized option trades (blocks) were starting to appear, hitting the current "ask" price of the RIMM calls, the 47 ½ calls and the 50 calls...in fact...here's Jon's exact, word-for-word update to his subscribers that afternoon:

"Someone thinks they know something in Research in Motion (RIMM), as the stock (+$1.96 to $46.42) and its options reflect a positive outlook for tonight's earnings report due after the close."

"The Jan 45, 47.5 & 50 calls are all actively trading, with the 2,800 contracts on the Jan 50 strike outpacing the field. When you get action in both the underlying stock and the options it's a bullish sign..."

One of Jon's subscribers, Ed from Rhode Island, decided to act on this peculiar set-up and p.m. Eastern Time (literally 15 minutes before the close) Ed bought 30 contracts of the Jan 45 options on RIMM which were trading for $3.50. (This cost Ed $350 per contract, so for 30 cc it cost him a total of $10,500).

After the market had closed on Dec 22nd, RIMM announced their earnings results... and r to say...they were eye-popping.

The stock immediately traded up sharply by $7.55 in "after hours" trading...and wha investors were about to wake up to would literally be "stop-in-your-tracks" stunning...

That's right, because thanks to RIMM, on Tuesday, December 23rd, (the next tr day following their earnings results) the floodgates re-opened for nearly everyth "tech"!

RIMM's earnings results (and higher forecasts for their NEXT earnings) had ma "okay" again for investors everywhere to start buying back into stocks – and esp tech stocks. Their earnings were really that good!

Heck... even if you just casually follow the markets, you probably remember all of those p headlines in December with Research in Motion (RIMM) at the center of them all!

After approximately 45 minutes into the trading day on Tuesday, RIMM was trading up $ $61.52! And later that day, RIMM would close at $69.23, up $22.19! A whopping 50% incr over the previous day's close! A 50% move in ONE TRADING DAY!

In fact, here's a 3 month chart showing this RIMM action:

And Ed? Ed sold his 30 contracts of the January 45 calls on Tuesday, December 23rd, for each...all told...Ed...in a matter of 'trading hours' (he held over-night), netted a cool, pu profit of $52,500! (And happily proclaims he will be a member of Jon's "Inside Options" fo

But Ed wasn't the only subscriber that got in on this move... just listen to what others had about this RIMM trade: (full names are not used due to the confidential nature of personal fir however, all comments from subscribers are kept on-file for your examination.)

"I bought 5 contracts of RIMM at $3.00 and sold them today for $16.20...tell J said thanks"

Alexander H.

"Jon, RIMM makes the best trade of my life so far! My wife is now hooked, an this trade that did it! She was so excited this morning that she paged me to call and when I did, I hadn't heard her this happy since our children were born! We going to raise up a few brewskis tonight in your honor! I'm also calling her the Queen. Thanks Jon!"

Frank B.

"Good morning: I have enjoyed reading your updates these last two weeks! It is amazing, I subscribe to IBD and the forum, and the people on the forum just do know why RIMM jumped up today...what an edge we have!"

Veronica G.

"Doctor J, Many, many, many thanks for RIMM! My biggest score yet. I netted $7,000 on a mere 5 contracts! Thank you DRJ for your site. Happy Holidays!"

Ralph M.

"Dr J, Let me tell you about RIMM!! I bought 26 of the 47.50 calls and 5 of the calls before the close on 12/22. Sold them the next morning when RIMM was i $63 range for a $31,000 profit – your tip was awesome!"

Carroll

"Jon, Today I became a true believer in your thesis that the system is rigged in the big guys and not for the small guys like me. Thank you Doctor J, you really leveling the playing field for the little guy!"

Sam M.

And this really is the tip of the iceberg! His members also profited handsomely when Nok graced the cover of a weekend Barron's edition (after the previous Friday's trading session re unusual trading activity in the options).

And since Jon started InsideOptions.com, he's also been 100% accurate on his predictions outcome of the last two Cisco Systems (CSCO) earnings announcements (one was bullish, on bearish) – and there's just too many others to mention!

Jon's InsideOptions.com information gives you such an edge, it'll actually make other inv secretly envy you... and wonder about every future move you make with your trades!

In a minute I'll reveal exactly how and why you can profit from Jon's discoveries (which i being spoon-fed each and every savory trade...kind of like shooting fish in a barrel!)

Perhaps that's why "Doctor J" has been featured in so many trading books, has authored his best selling book, "How I Trade Options" and is frequently quoted in columns such as Barron's, Wall Street Journal, CBS MarketWatch, Reuters, Bloomberg, Dow Jones News Service, etc.

The fact is, Jon's a master of the options market. And that's exactly why his opinion is courted by the media, authors, and leading financial experts...

I could go on and on for pages about Jon. But instead of doing that, you should read a little that illustrates just how "exclusive" the information is that you'll be getting your hands on as InsideOptions.com member...

How a Respected Wall Street Reporter Was Unable to Get His Hands on Exclusive, "From-the-Floor" Inform While Jon's "Inside Options" Members Knew Exactly What Was Going On!

I mentioned the RIMM trade earlier – well, on December 22, 2003, just hours before their earnings announcement (which was coming after the close)... Jon started seeing some unusual volume on the short term call options on RIMM.

So he reports this information to his "Inside Options" members.

A sharp reporter who writes for a high-profile Wall Street newspaper spoke with Jon and p him for his unusual report on RIMM. And he told Jon he had somehow seen the very "Inside Options" report Jon sent out to his members reporting this unusual volume the day before ear were announced.

Now here's what's interesting... he said he called down to the trading floor to verify it with some other traders he knew... and they told him they didn't see anything unusual going on!

Do you follow me?... here's a well-respected Wall Street reporter who had trader FRIENI the floor – but when he called them to confirm what Jon reported... THEY PRETENDED THERE WAS NOTHING UNUSUAL ABOUT IT!

Why?

Because they make their living by NOT letting anyone else "in" on this exclusive information!

And it's part of the reason why the seats on the C.B.O.E. sell for $300,000 to $400,000 EA And it's also why the price is one-million per seat on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange!

For the most part, traders on the floor just aren't going to disclose this insider activity if you want that same, exclusive, "straight-from-the-floor information" that they have... figure you can come in and buy your own seat so you can see it for yourself!

And, believe me...

If You Paid $350,000 to Be In That “Inside Group” Then YOU’D Want to Make Sure
You Profited From Being There, Too... Right!?

So it's not that they're doing anything illegal... they're just covering their own butts! Botto line... the best the Wall Street reporters can do is get the story of unusual options volume rep tomorrow's paper.

But Jon's subscribers get it AS IT IS HAPPENING DURING THAT VERY DAY!

And here's what will NEVER CHANGE: A select, powerful few will always profit from fire” stock moves – known in advance. Their account balances always keep growing bec they're privy to this inside information.

It's like the old saying...

“Wall Street speaks a different language to the masses because it cannot afford to alienate its powerful backers.”

And they don't want you to find out... But they can't prevent you from finding out!

So what's their secret?

They take their money to the OPTIONS MARKET just before big news hits the actu itself. A minute ago, I said I would tell you exactly how and why this happens...

Here's how this works.

First of all, you have to understand what options are...

Stocks have been around for literally hundreds of years. But listed options are relatively new... just 30 years old. So, if you're like most investors – you may not know much about options. Just in case you don't, I want to give you a simple example illustrating how options work:

Let's say a local car audio store runs an ad in your newspaper – they're having a sale on car stereos for $150. But by the time you get to the store, the manager lets you know that the car stereo you wanted is already out-of-stock.

To be good about it, though, he gives you a rain check that entitles you to buy the car stereo for the sale price of $150 anytime within the next two months – even if the price goes higher.

That rain check is just like an option. You have the right, but not the obligation to purchase the car stereo at the guaranteed price of $150 until the expiration date in two months.

Now, let me explain to you a little bit about the difference between buying a share of stock and buying an option.

Let's say you think you've discovered a killer stock... one that's going to rise in price like a rocket and you invest ten-thousand dollars in that stock. Let's also say the price of each share is $10. This means for your ten-thousand dollars you get to buy 100 shares of stock.

Now – let's paint an extremely rosy picture and say this stock jumps in price by fifty percent.

When the price of the stock rose, you made $50 profit for each of your 100 shares – or a g

$5,000. That sounds great – right?

But now, let's start over and say you put your ten-thousand dollars into options to buy the instead of the stock itself. (An option gives you the "right" – but not the obligation – to buy a of stock.)

Let's also say you could buy an option to buy shares of that same killer stock at five-dolla That means your ten-thousand dollars will let you buy 20 option contracts (option "contracts" represent 100 shares of stock each, so a $5 priced option really costs $500 per contract).

So the same ten-thousand buys 20 option contracts (and keep in mind, 20 option contracts "controls" or represents 2000 shares of stock rather than just 100 shares of stock.)

And we'll keep the extremely rosy picture we painted just a minute ago and say that this s jumps in price by the same fifty percent.

However, with options you have to calculate your profits a little bit differently.

When you bought the actual shares you got to keep the entire fifty-dollar jump in price. Bt you bought the options you have to first subtract the cost of purchasing the option (in this cas dollars) from the jump in the share price.

So in this case, instead of making a full fifty dollars on each share you bought, you only m on each option you bought.

However, since your original ten-thousand dollars allowed you to purchase twenty option contracts (as opposed to only one-hundred shares of stock) your total profit changes, also. Wl purchased the one-hundred shares your profit was five-thousand dollars (100 shares x $50 pr

But in this case, when you purchase 20 option contracts and made forty-five dollars profit option that amounts to a gain of ninety-thousand dollars.

And That, My Friend, Demonstrates the Power and Leverage You Get With Options.

And get this:

Options Are Cheaper Now Than They've Been In the Last 4 Years!

That's right... option premium levels (what it costs to buy an option) are extremely low ri now. Now's the time, when you're seeing a face card in your hand... to double down.

For example... an option that would normally trade for $4.00 is now trading for $2.75... s very good time to be an option buyer. Even if the premium prices weren't at their four-year lc options are a lot less risky than trading individual stocks!

The real experienced traders know this... and so do "insider" CEOs... that's right... they l that options are less risky – but there's also another little-known reason these CEOs go to the market...

They Get 100 Times the Leverage Compared To Buying the Plain Old Stock!

So they go to the options market when they know "news" is coming out because they can get 100 times the return!

Why would they trade the stock when they can get a HUNDRED times the leverage from options!?

DUH!... it's a no-brainer...

And that's exactly what the "big players" do, too! Who are these "big players"?

They're known as the "Institutional Money"... these are big investment firms that throw n around like crazy... companies like Merrill Lynch, Bear-Stearns, Goldman Sachs, and Solom Smith-Barney.

But they're also "hedge funds", which are multi-million-dollar private investments of the wealthy... institutions are also major pension funds, foundations and large family trust accou

These are HUGE PLAYERS... and they have resources greater than any individual trader. not only can they throw large sums of money around –

They Can "Earn" Certain "Favors" Just For Doing So!

Let me explain...

A typical hedge fund can spend $20 to $40 million a-year just on commissions! Just think that!... sheesh... $20 to $40 MILLION in commissions alone!!!

And guess what?...

They can funnel these commission dollars to any "insider" source that they're looking to g "favors" from. (It's sort of like an indiscreet bribe... and it's what happens behind the scenes single day.)

And Jon pays careful attention to every options trade these big-boys make...

How does he do it?

Well, very few individuals can throw around 1,000 contracts at a time... yet...for the majc these "institutions", this is the MINIMUM they will trade!

Why?

Well... it's because they're managing $50, $100, $200 million or even billions of dollars! . you're managing, say, a $100-million hedge fund, you really can't afford to mess around with contract trade. Because even if you were dead-on right and the stock moved the right way (ev moves BIG) it's just not going to make any kind of difference in a fund that size!

For example... let's say they were right on a 50-contract trade and the option went up $3 i On 50 contracts, that's a measly $15,000 profit – which is NOTHING on a $100 million acco

It's not going to make their day – heck – it won't even pay for the electricity to run their o for a month... let alone pay for any of the other overhead they have when running a $100 mil fund!

So that's why they play with 1,000, 2,000, even 5,000 contract lots or more (a "lot" is "flo language" for 1,000 contracts). And this unusual kind of trading volume is exactly what Jon's sophisticated computers and servers are set up to look for...

However, there's still one KEY missing ingredient, even after spotting where these big players are placing their sure bets! And here it is: how does Jon know if this volume represents someone "buying" or "selling" them!?

This big volume is worthless to spot if you can't tell if it's volume created by a new buy order – or if it's volume because someone just sold out!

Here's how Jon can tell the difference...

When someone buys, they buy at the "ask" price... when they sell, they have to sell at the "bid". And by doing a simple "time and sales" report, Jon can tell exactly w these big block trades happened AND whether they were buys or sells.

If a 2,000-contract lot of options traded on the "ask" price, it means there's an aggressive trader that knows something... and he's buying!

Well, by now, you know the smart money trades in these big lots, right?

So... you may be thinking that you could just watch for these big volume trades yourself and join on that gravy train... right? Well... here's something you need to know...

Not All Volume is Created Equal!

There are hundreds of "gurus" and newsletter big-shots out there telling people what to buy and when in the options market... and some of their followings are ENORMOUS!

For example... when a "Michael Murphy" or some other "guru" gets in a trade (based on his opinion or a "chart") and then alerts all of their newsletter subscribers about it, traders on the street refer to these trades as...

The "March of the Ants"

Why do they call it "the march of the ants"?

It's because they start to see a bunch of different orders (from all over the planet) of 5 contracts here, 10 contracts there, 3 contracts here, etc.

And it's basically a just a bunch of "blind followers" taking the trades their heroic big-shot tells them to take!... and Jon's computers can instantly see "the march of the ants" and sort it out from the real, "smart money" trades!

(And by the way, when the market makers see these "ant-sized-trades" hitting the trading floor all at once, they do their darndest to get them to pay the HIGHEST POSSIBLE PRICE because they know once the "march" is over... the option prices will go right back to where they were before.

Jon has an "option block ticker" which feeds in from 4 different computer servers (which interface with five major option exchanges). His computers can track every bit of volume in every "optional class (for indexes and individual stocks) on all five options exchanges in the United States.

And when these computer servers see option block trading, bells and whistles (literally) go off in his office – which makes them immediately turn their head to the exact pit where these option block trades are trading!

And Jon can adjust this...for example...on busy days...he sets the alert to go off on any block over 900 to 1,000 contracts (at a time)...and on a slow day, he may set it at 400 option contract blocks.

Essentially, Jon has created...

A Masterful Way Of Pin-Pointing And Tracking Wall Street's Greed

And the good news is this... YOU DON'T HAVE TO UNDERSTAND ANY OF "HOW" IT WORKS! You just have to know how to make an option trade, and how to follow Jon's instructions each day!

Want Some Examples?...

Let's take a look at some REAL-WORLD scenarios – the exact stuff that Jon tracks – where unusual option volume zooms in BEFORE the actual news is even known to the public:

- A regional broadcasting company's stock is about to explode when it next announces earnings (those "in the know" have seen the revenues from a nastier than expected, political TV ad campaign – and have bought an unusual amount of "call" options in anticipation of the earnings!)
- Chinese internet stocks are about to run wild because a major news story (due out shortly) is getting ready to announce the containment of the deadly SARS virus (and those close to this news source, quietly buy up call options on the different Chinese internet companies anticipating this upward move in the stocks after this news announcement).
- A specific tech stock that's been mired in the mud for the last two years is about to get upgrades from some major, big-name investment firms after their soon-to-be-announced-earnings show a healthy increase over last year's.... PLU! an increased forecast going forward. (again, those close to this "inside info", secretly go to the options market first, planning for a large, leveraged move in the options, on even a small move in the stock itself!)
- A lighter than expected jobs report will be coming out soon, making these housing and mortgage company stocks look very attractive. (Again, to avoid the obvious, those "in the know" search out a few leading housing stocks, quietly buy up the options, then look to quickly sell them after the stock pops up in price due to this news)
- Clinical trials of a new drug aren't going so well and the FDA is getting ready to issue a news release. This news will hammer the company's stock price – (this particular company didn't have any other drugs in the "pipeline" – it was really hoping this drug would be the one to pay off). Knowing this beforehand, and to make a bundle on this "bad" news -- the "smart money" buys large quantities of "put" options to profit on this stock's crash!

You're getting the picture now, right?

You're seeing how these people "in the know"... are able to use options to make absolutely outrageous gains on these types of plays, right?

These Trades Make Sense... and Jon

Now, before you get too excited... you need to know that this is NOT a normal subscription service... a normal subscription service will take absolutely anyone and everyone.

That's not the case with Jon's InsideOptions membership... in fact, you'll notice there's no "order form" or "sign-up" form anywhere on this website. That's because you actually have to qualify to become a member!

Let me explain...

In order to keep the integrity of the subscription service, Jon's putting a limit on the number of members allowed in.

Why?

It's quite obvious if you stop and think about it at all... having too many traders act on the same information all at once can actually defeat the purpose of the subscription service.

Also, you'll have to complete a 3-page application to make sure Jon's services matches your trading and investing style.

You see, Jon's passion and specialty is focusing on short-term trading situations – and that may not fit you if you're an investor with a longer term approach. See what I mean?

And quite frankly, another reason for the application process isn't so obvious...

Jon wants to make sure that you're NOT one of the privileged few who already have the same advantage HE has.

(You'd think these big players, close to the smart money would be content with the insider-privileges they already have... but... truth be told... the rich can never get rich enough! And they're probably even more excited about the chance to get Jon's cutting edge information than you are!)

The fact is... they're just as hungry to make their fortunes as easily as possible – and Jon's service will give them just that... an easier way to build their wealth. And Jon wants to filter these "insiders" OUT in order to give you (the individual investor) a true edge.

InsideOptions.com is perfect for today's investing reality. "Buy and hold" is out... position trading and capitalizing on faster and faster trends is "here to stay". Truth be told, getting in and out of fast stock trends is the best way to trade and invest.

This is stuff that will be talked about on TV the next day... but you get the info between 12-18 hours before the rest of the world hears about it! In fact if you've seen Jon on "First Business", a syndicated television show in 160 cities, you've probably wished you could get his "picks" ahead of the program... which runs between 4 am - 7 am in most markets.

Well guess what?... NOW YOU CAN!!! (It's best to have after hours trading capability through some kind of ECN like Island or Archipelago to take advantage of this particular update).

- 4. Access to a Private, "Members Only", Monthly, Live Conference Call Direct With "The Doctor" Himself. In the real world, things change... markets change... sentiments change... and Jon's been through all this -- he's seen every kind of market you can imagine. And having access to him once a month to ask him questions is just invaluable.

He's there to guide your every move. Other people with a big name like Jon don't bother to do a monthly conference call with their members! This is part of the reason why Jon's looking for serious players...

These other spineless gurus cop-out by telling you to buy and hold "Intel" or something insane like that. But Jon won't leave you high and dry... he gives you hard-nosed specifics that you can use to profit from. So bring your specific questions to the table each and every month and sit back and learn from a true master.

Now... you'd probably think a limited-member subscription service from a 23-year trading genius like Doctor J would cost a fortune.

After all, the guy's one of the most sought-out and highly paid experts in the world when it comes to options for crying out loud!

And literally tens of thousands of traders and investors have spent up to $5,000 EACH just to hear Jon's money-making secrets during 2 and 3 day seminars!

But InsideOptions.com isn't a seminar.

It's better, because as a member of InsideOptions.com you'll be spoon fed what insiders are secretly betting on – any unusual volume that Jon catches, you'll learn about it as if you were right there on the trading floor! Also...

You'll Be Getting Jon's Own "Trade Of Day" Trades, Just About Every Single Day
the Stock Market Is Open!

What's more, the only other way you can get this information is to spend $350,000 and move to Chicago, then hope and pray that you can make it past the skimpy 22-month average career of the typical CBOE trader!

Or... you can find some way on God's green earth to start throwing millions of dollars around and earn your OWN special "favours" from brokers, bankers, and other big-shots.

Think about it... Jon actually ended his membership in the CBOE just to cut free of the bureaucratic red-tape and confining rules of not being able to speak directly to individual investors.

He gave it all up!

And he did it just so he could launch InsideOptions.com. You know he's serious about it. You've seen the type of money people have made on a single trade. And you've seen Jon's reputation... he's "for real".

He's gotten a lot of pressure from his professional peers to NOT allow this information out for a paltry amount of money – most of them recommending he charge at least $1000 per month. (Remember... they're paying $350,000 to get their hands on this information...)

But Jon's created this with the individual investor in mind. And although you've got to meet a certain set of criteria (as determined by Jon's application process) Jon felt the $1000 per month is just too much.

As a Charter Member... if you're accepted... you'll be able to lock-in the special "Charter Member Rate" of just $495 per month, renewable each month. OR... if you'd rather, you can invest a one-time payment of $4995 and get a full year's membership in InsideOptions.com. (You get 12 months for the price of 10!... plus you get a special "extra" bonus others don't get!... read on for details...)

Consider this... hundreds of seminar attendees have paid $5000 to learn from Jon at his 3-day seminars. And you'd agree... the $495 per month is just slightly less than the $350,000-per-seat at the Chicago Board of Options Exchange you'd need to get your hands on this information otherwise!!!

But... Jon does understand that not just anyone can afford this.

And the truth is... he DOESN'T WANT JUST ANYONE!!!

Quite frankly, Jon has a pretty particular image in his mind about who he WANTS to be in this membership. He wants to surround himself with individual players...

Fun-loving people with big hearts who love life. Risk-takers who understand there will be some losers, but are full of confidence that in the long run they'll come out miles ahead from where they started.

So if you don't have two dimes to rub together, just tuck this website away in the back of your mind and come back to it at another time when you won't be playing with your grocery money... okay? I mean that sincerely... not sarcastically. (And once you're at that place – you'll understand why.)

And, if you're accepted, you'll also get several valuable free gifts as a Charter Member of InsideOptions.com – take a look...

Jon Also Reveals A Particular Strategy He's Uses That's NEARLY NEVER BEEN WRONG!

Jon's sophisticated computers and servers also alert him to one other situation... which whenever this particular situation happens...it's NEARLY NEVER BEEN WRONG IN JON'S 23 YEARS OF WATCHING IT!

That's right...it's almost NEVER BEEN WRONG...and has always predicted a stock move that's about to happen in the future... here it is:

If Jon sees some option (with reasonable volume) out-pacing the move in the underlying stock itself (which means someone is so frantically buying the options, that they don't care what they're paying for the options...they just want them that bad) – then something is out of whack (meaning someone knows the stock is about to get some kind of news which will move the stock higher!)

Here's an example:

Let's say there's a stock trading at $50 per share...

Now, for every $1 move in this stock, an "at the money" call option (the 1 month out, $50 call options on the stock) – should move approximately $.50 cents.

So let's say on some busy trading day, that stock moves from $50 to $51.50, basically a $1.50 move in the stock... normally the $50 call would move approximately $.75 cents with this move in the stock.

If, however, Jon sees that instead of this $.75 cent move, that this option moves $2 (from like $2 to $4) and the option is clearly outpacing the movement of the stock – then something's wrong ("wrong" meaning good for us! It means there's opportunity here!)

If you see the "at the money" calls moving as much or more than the underlying stock – that means there's more buyers than sellers at that price. The buyers keep wanting more and the sellers keep ratcheting up the premium of the options for these overzealous buyers!

Jon's almost never, ever, ever seen this fail! It means that the stock is about to go higher over the next little while!

(And instead of you looking and scanning for this unique situation to occur... which would be impossible... Jon's computers routinely search this out and "sound off" when it wants to tell Jon where and when this happening on the over 4,000 stocks that have options traded on them!)

Bonus #4: Doctor J's "CPR Strategy" (a $147 value)

This specially prepared report reveals Jon's popular "CPR Strategy"... a strategy he popularized, that is so effective, the C.B.O.E.'s own instructors teach this strategy in their advanced seminars!

"C.P.R." stands for "Current Portfolio Repair" and is designed to help get you back to even on a fallen stock...even if the stock never again returns to the price where you bought it!

For example, if your stock has dropped by 20, 30, or even 40% in value... this strategy can bring you back to break-even, or better! Even more amazing, this strategy costs you NOTHING OUT OF YOUR OWN POCKET (in fact, Jon teaches that you're doing it all wrong if you don't actually GET PAID to do this! Amazing!)

Jon also explains how you can do this special strategy on a stock that DOESN'T need repairing! You'll be blown away with the profit potential of this awesome strategy...in fact...you'll be wondering where it's been hiding all this time!

Bonus #5: An Autographed Copy of Dr. J's Best-Selling Book, "How I Trade Options" (a $40 value)

Doctor J Gives You A Completely Legal Inside-Peek At Where The "Real Players" Are Placing Their "Bets" Every Single Day...

And He Gives You a Complete Game Plan For Profiting From This Information!

Look, with the world moving as fast as it is today, with products, breakthroughs, upgrades and downgrades around every corner, and news hitting with lightening speed now, MORE THAN EVER, you need to know where this "inside" or "smart money" is placing its bets!

Every single year there are literally hundreds and hundreds of compelling situations where stocks have "unusual option activity" happen to them!

And Jon sifts and sorts through it all – finding the most unusual and stunning option activity (either bullish or bearish) and then hands them to you on a silver platter!

And Jon's "dead-ringer" information can't be found ANYWHERE else outside of tl option-trading-floor! Now... with that in mind -- you may be wondering why Doctor J i willing to share these once hidden golden nuggets?

Well, there are really two reasons:

1) After 23-years in the business, Jon has handed the reigns and responsibility of managing his floor traders over to his younger brother Pete (another NFL linebacker!) This has allowed Jon to share what he knows about trading options with the average, everyday investor.

And secondly...

2) Jon understands fully and completely the con-job and outright manipulation the big "trusted" investment firms play on the public. Scaring investors out of one stock (only to be buying it themselves)...then, saying good things about another stock (when they know deep down the company is a piece of garbage)... all to get more underwritir fees – not caring ONE LICK about the integrity of what they say!

And, Jon is a little more than ticked-off about what the average individual investor has to wade through. Not to mention the manipulation and outright LYING is only getting worse!

The only way around it is to see where the "smart money" is actually placing its bets... and that's exactly what Jon does best!

And there's not a more perfect time to join Jon as he "spills the beans" directly from the trading floor! In fact, any sane investor should drop every normal stock market subscription service they have (including shutting off the TV) and become a member o InsideOptions.com

For The First Time Ever, Jon "Doctor J" Najarian

Is Going to Expose You To This “Inside” Action, Virtually Every Day The Market Is Open!

But with this being a limited subscription – you gotta act fast and subscribe RIGHT AWAY, here’s why:

Hedge fund managers, private trust advisors, and other investors close to the “smart money” have already caught wind of what Jon is doing with InsideOptions.com, and guess what?

They’re doing their best to slip through Jon’s application process in hopes of quietly snapping up all the available memberships.

You’d think these privileged multi-millionaires would be content with getting some of the insider news out there...but unfortunately, it’s not this way – they want ALL of it, all the time!

They're hoping to get "in" on Jon's advice... but he's really working hard to filter the out. Now -- if they want Jon's information, don't you think you should, too?

Listen... if you’d rather, you can get CitiGroup’s investment advice – I mean, hey... all you have to do is open an account and you can get it for free! (Their advice has been available for free for years... and look how helpful it has been!)

Why bother when InsideOptions.com gives you a trip through a profit-dense jungle with low hanging fruit! Compare the InsideOption advantage to...

The Dangerous Advice Millions of Investors are Listening to...

No matter the recent “reforms,” Wall Street is plain crooked with favors owed in every direction and information that’s always known by a select, powerful few.

This greed, these favors, and this information – all this major smart “secret money” goes to the options market first. And anyone on the floor sees it happen every day.

And millions and millions of investors routinely get led along and manipulated at every turn by a relative powerful few... popular analysts for major Wall Street power brokerage firms say one thing on the news wires, while they secretly plan to do the opposite.

This also came to light during the 9/11 crisis, where it became national news that terrorists associated with the 9/11 attacks, secretly made millions upon millions of dollars with options – knowing full well the attacks were only days away...(you can read more about this on the front page of the Insideoptions website)

What Jon shows you is this: Instead of fighting this “secret money”... why not be a little barnacle on the bottom of their boat when the “big players” start putting their smart money on the table!?

Then go along for the ride with them?

The truth is... without InsideOptions.com you’ll just be like one of the millions of “sheep” that continually gets lead along and manipulated at every turn by a powerful few...

- The widely quoted analysts for popular Wall Street brokerage firms say one thing on the news wires, while they secretly plan to do the opposite...

- The newsletter gurus brag about their one or two winners a year just to keep their “guru status”... but in reality, they lose on far more trades than they report on...
- The popular books on investing that still tell you to “buy and hold”...

Listen... with the speed of the Internet and countless financial shows on the boob-tube, millions of investors are listening to dangerous advice, again... and before too long... it's gonna cost 'em... again!

But you don't have to be a part of it... charts, indicators, momentum oscillators, hunches, following guru-newsletters and the concept of “luck” are all a waste of your time and won't matter when you become a member of InsideOptions.com!

I know the truth can be painful... but consider this:

Isn't following along like a sheep what got millions of investors into trouble during the “dot-com” bubble burst? Most people are still hunkered over, remembering what they lost in that bear market.

If you're one of those people that lost... I've got good news for you:

InsideOptions Will Help You Get Back What You Lost... Quicker Than Anything Else!

If you're accepted as a Charter Member... you'll invest just $495 per month, renewable each month. OR... if you'd rather, you can invest a one-time payment of $4995 and get a full year's membership in InsideOptions.com. (You get 12 months for the price of 10!)

And remember... hundreds of seminar attendees have paid $5000 to learn from Jon at his 3-day seminars. And you'd agree... the $495 per month is just slightly less than the $350,000-per-seat at the Chicago Board of Options Exchange you'd need to get your hands on this information otherwise!

Don't delay another minute. The available memberships are sure to go fast. So fax in your application right away. The sooner you do, the sooner you'll be seeing the action from an “insiders” point of view – and you'll never trade the same way again...

And like I said... not everyone can OR will be accepted. Those who are accepted will be taken on a first-come, first-serve basis – so apply right now, while it's fresh on your mind.

Look – you've really got just a couple of options here when you really boil it all down. First, you can keep struggling... hoping that you can recover what you've lost... hoping that the latest and greatest indicator will save your rear... and hoping that this latest and greatest guru's track record is for real...

The startling fact is -- I can't believe how misguided people are in my own profession! I mean, there's more "trading education", books, seminars, software, and subscriptions today than ever before.

With all this floating around in the ether, you'd think the average investor would finally be making money hand over fist. But the truth is... it's just the opposite. People are more disgruntled and frustrated than ever. And chances are... you're one of them.

OR...

You can escape the mind-numbing confusion of all their opinions and start trading based on facts... the facts that Jon reports to you.

InsideOptions is like having your own "personal escape plan" that lets you take control. You'll be climbing onboard and placing your trades where the "on-the-floor insiders" are placing their trades. (Imagine that... you actually get "in the market" right alongside all the "big money".)

And then, the stock price takes off like a rocket with you onboard! No more wishin you could'a been "in" on that trade... because you WERE "IN"!

Bottom line... I've just described to you the exact edge InsideOptions gives you, my friend. But it can't possibly be yours if you don't even bother to apply.

And $495 is a painless drop in the bucket compared to the staggering potential being "in" on these trades offers you. Looking at it that way, you can't afford NOT to be a part of this.

Isn't This Insider Trading... and Isn't That Illegal?

Insider trading is defined as gaining “inside” knowledge or information that’s not yet available to the public – and then placing trades based on that knowledge.

What kind of knowledge?... well, for example... let’s say you’re an attorney working for Enron and you find-out 3-weeks before anyone else that the company is going to declare bankruptcy – and yet the stock is still moving up at $50 a share. It would be illegal for you to make a trade based on this information, or even for you to tell anyone else about it.

InsideOptions is not illegal... and it’s definitely NOT “Insider Trading” like what happened with Enron or Tyco. But it IS... tipping us off to what the “insiders” are doing!

What do I mean?

Well, once someone steps to the plate and makes a trade, guess what? It’s instantly public knowledge!

And the trades Jon sees are OUT IN THE PUBLIC... and Jon doesn’t know (or even care) who or what the inside news is... all he does is “notice” what’s happening – the fact is, the guy simply knows what to look for after 23-years in the business. What’s more...

He knows that the greed of these “insiders” has always been around and will never stop.

Just because Jon calls it “InsideOptions” doesn’t mean what he’s doing is “insider trading”... not at all! You get in trouble for insider trading when you act on information that is unavailable to the public.

On the other hand, what Jon and his team do is watch the bets (trades) that institutions and other “players” routinely make in the options market. And since these trades are made on the options exchanges, out in the open ... there’s nothing illegal about it!

Let me give you a quick example:

Jon and his traders are able to see a large, private fund suddenly buy 5,000 contracts of the $45 calls on Wal-Mart which expire 6 months down the road (5,000 contracts represents 500,000 shares of Wal-Mart stock..and it gives the private fund the “right” to buy 500,000 shares of Wal-Mart at $45 per share anytime between now and 6 months away).

All that really means is this: basically if the stock goes up from $45 to $47, $48, $50 or $52 (or more)...they have the right to buy Wal-Mart at $45 any time they choose, in this example, for up to 6 months of time!

So if it goes up to $70, they can STILL BUY IT at $45 (just like the car stereo example), and even immediately turn around and sell it ‘at market’ for $70 a share. Thi would be an instant gain of $25 (and they never had to pony up the huge money to buy the actual 500,000 shares of Wal-Mart!)

So now it makes you wonder... what does this private fund know that the public doesn't

- Why did they buy a 6 month option (instead of 1 month, or a 12 month option)?
- Was this large private fund owed some kind of favor? And were they tipped off that earnings will now start to improve? (making the stock move higher)
- Will there be some positive press, maybe even a magazine cover?
- Will a new product announcement soon create headlines all over the wire services?
- Will a pending lawsuit be settled in the next couple of weeks?

Well... Dr. J doesn't really care what the reason is... he just "notifies" that it happened – the fact remains that some serious "in-the-know" money is being slapped down. This money is anticipating a large, leveraged return it simply couldn't get with a regular stock purchase.

And here's the key point...

This Kind Of Money Is Rarely Wrong!

There Are Other Websites That Track SEC Filings Reporting the Buys and Sells of Major CEOs.

What's the Difference Between InsideOptions.com and These "Insider" Sites?

Don't confuse InsideOptions with some of the other "Insider" subscriptions that deal with the buying and selling of a company's stock by CEO's and other higher-ups.

(Again... if someone's significantly involved with a company, then their buys and sells must be filed with the S.E.C.) – anyway – while this could tip you off to something in the future, it's vague at best IF & WHEN anything will EVER happen!

Think about it... Bill Gates has been selling his Microsoft stock pretty much from the get go. If you watched these SEC filings and decided Microsoft must not be a good investment because Bill Gates himself was selling his own shares, you would have missed out on one of the biggest stocks in modern history! (A stock that for 14-years averaged a 1% appreciation EACH WEEK!)

So why has Bill Gates been selling his shares? There are several reasons:

Maybe he wants cash. Maybe he wants to start a charity. Or maybe he's looking to diversify. And there can be a million other reasons!

The point is... those SEC filings aren't going to tell you anything! Besides that...

These insiders don't have to report their trades until 3 weeks AFTER they do it! A lot of help that is!!!

So the difference is simple: InsideOptions.com gives you up-to-the-second information you can actually TRADE ON AND MAKE MONEY WITH! You can't make money with 3-week old, meaningless information!

Isn't This Like Day Trading?

InsideOptions is also NOT... "Day Trading!"

Here's why:

With day trading, you risk a TON of dough on every single trade. You're risking ten or even hundreds of thousands of dollars to make a few hundred here or there.

You're also spending ALL DAY "stuck" staring at monitors and screens with complex charts, colors, news feeds, and level 1,2, or 3 datafeeds... sitting on the edge of your seat waiting for the next blip up or down!

And the worst part is when you are "right," you're always taking teeny, tiny profits...but when you're wrong...well... no one seems to talk about the STAGGERING SUMS they lose when day trading!

(Human nature has you hanging on to the losers hoping they'll go back up!)

Even worse... human nature kicks-in again and you end-up frustrated and guessing on 90% of your trades. (Not quite like the system you back-traded with 90% winners, right?)

Summed up...day trading is a nightmare and only for those who can stomach mounting losses and who can afford to lose time after time because they are bored or something?...

But anyway...while you may only hold one of Jon's trades for only a day (like Ed, c Rhode Island, from the RIMM trade mentioned a minute ago)...you're trading with OPTIONS (not stock).

And remember – options cost a fraction compared to buying the real stock outright!

And the biggest difference is this: you are buying the same options the "smart money" is buying! And don't forget... this "smart money" is buying options for a reason! (A GOOD reason... after all, they ARE "insiders"...)

Your trade is the same trade that smarter and closer-to-the-action money is making, pretty much assuring you of the right stock move... which translates into a potentially HUGE move in the options themselves.

That's exactly why the smart money goes to the options market first... to make these OBSCENE, fast, leveraged profits!

Options give them almost unfair advantage, and it can happen fast!

And you get the same benefits!

Do I Have To Know Chart Reading and Technical Analysis?

The truth of the matter is chart reading and technical analysis are based on the past, and technical analysis has got to be the most confusing and frustrating things that investors and traders have to deal with.

But, since it's the only thing most traders and investors ever see, they keep going back to it thinking that "this time it'll be different... this time... it'll work because NOW I've got the best moving average on the planet"... and on and on it goes.

But remember this, because it's based on the past... it absolutely doesn't change! Think about it... a stock can gap up by 30% in one day simply because of news... and all the chart reading in the world wouldn't have alerted you to the move!

InsideOptions.com gives you an edge... telling you what's about to happen in the future... something no stock chart or indicator can give you.

Aren't Options "Risky"?

Options are relatively new... and the truth is, most people are uneducated about them. And that's what spreads these rumors about options being risky.

Heck, even experienced stockbrokers just don't understand them. But options aren't difficult... they're just different.

What's funny is, brokers have no problem urging you to buy a $90 stock... where you risk dollar-for-dollar what you're investing. That's a lot to lose!

Whereas, an option on that same stock would give you 10-times the leverage while costing a puny $3! And there's no limit on the potential return and yet the maximum you can lose is $3.00 instead of $90!

Tell me what's more risky?... losing $90 or losing $3... Stocks are obviously more risky. And since you won't be buying and holding on any of the InsideOptions.com trades, you'll spend a fraction of what you would otherwise investing in "buy and hold" stocks.

And plus, if the real players are using options, take a cue from them and start trading options yourself!

The fact is... there's risk in ANYTHING. The world's full of risk... and when you open a trading account you're assuming risk.

It's a lot less risky for you to buy right alongside the big players than it is for you to go out and just buy an option on your own.

InsideOptions Gives You an Edge
You Can't Get Anywhere Else!

I've Seen Tons of Different Subscription Services...
Newsletters, Email Updates, and Faxes... All Claiming To Give Me An "Edge".

What Makes InsideOptions Any Different?

The truth is... it's almost unfair to call Jon's InsideOptions.com service a "subscription".

Why?

Because a “subscription” implies that it’s just another guy’s opinion.

But Jon doesn’t have an opinion... he’s merely reporting on the facts. And these facts are so secretive, sensitive and market-moving - he resigned his C.B.O.E. seat over it!

You don’t want opinions... you want FACTS... and that’s what Jon gives you. Opinions are a dime a dozen – and there are lots of them floating around in newsletters. Jon simply reports to you big boosts in option volume – a fact.

That’s the problem with those “Guru Newsletters”...

You sign-up for it... and then you hope and pray that his so-called “winning streak” doesn’t come to end on the very week you sign-up! Listen... again... all a newsletter boils down to is “some guys opinion”.

And if he can catch a base-hit once or twice a year, he thinks that gives him enough credentials to make you pay for his opinions all year long!

Like I said before... you don’t want opinions – you want facts. And that’s what Jon will give you!

Hasn’t There Been Enough Reforms on Wall Street to Clean-Up All These “Favors” and “Insider Back Scratching” Making a Service Like InsideOptions Obsolete?

It’s NOT a clean game out there, despite the recent headlines of reform in the financial markets... there’s just not the cracking down that the public thinks there is.

But Jon can say it better than anyone... here’s what he said on a recent interview on the subject of Wall Street reform:

“Now for any of you out there that say ‘Jon it’s a clean game and the SEC is out there watching this stuff’ – for the most part it is, there are people watching – and this is NOT a rigged game. Everyone can come in and make money.”

“However, there is so much going on out there and the SEC commissioners have more than it can ever handle due to the unbridled greed on Wall Street.”

“And you don’t have to look much further than the NYSE, who recently wanted to ‘come clean’ and get investors confidence back – so what do they do? They go get a guy from Goldman Sachs as their new Chairman! (How’s that for reform?!)”

“And then... they go get the former head of J.P. Morgan as the CEO! Next... they get someone from CitiGroup as head of their regulatory division.”

“Now... these could all be great people – and I certainly don’t have anything against them as individuals – but guess what?”

They’re ALL Already Part of the “Dirty System” and the NYSE Hasn’t Really Cleaned-up ANYTHING By Doing It!

“And if you tracked the unusual activity I’ve seen during the last 23 years down on the floor...if I didn’t see something that smacked of something purely illegal down there 2-3 times a week, I’d be surprised!”

“And truth is... I don’t see everything, or even pretend that I can be all-watching and all-knowing. But there's an awful lot of stuff going on that is clearly someone thinking they know something and 24 hours later we find they DID know something and I've seen maybe a handful of cases where they actually investigated and caught the guy."

"And some of these guys could be real good at doing their homework (like Charlie Sheen in the movie "Wall Street") – I guess that could happen maybe 1% of the time! But 99% of the time it's someone knowing something and leaking it to someone else."

Isn't This Just Another "News Based" Trading System?

No... InsideOptions trades are not news-based trades.

The problem with "news-based" trading systems is that 99.9% of all investor don't know beforehand what or when the news will hit the news wires. And when news is announced, you feel like the train has already left the station!

And while it's true that stocks DO move because of news... 99.9% of the time it's impossible to know beforehand when the news will break.

NOTHING beats the profit potential or the emotional high of being in the right trade BEFORE news is announced – NOTHING!

And that's exactly the game these insiders play – because ultimately... they're determined to look out for themselves. And that's exactly the game Jon is invitin YOU to play.
